Zagreb - Hrvatska

130 godina škole (1882. - 2012.)

The School of Applied Arts and Design in Zagreb grew out of the Royal School of Crafts founded in 1882. It was established by Herman Bolle, bishop Strossmayer and Isidor Kršnjavi. The School participated in numerous exhibitions, and the most prominent at the time were the ones in Paris in 1937, New York in 1939 and Rome in 1941.

Today the School of Applied Arts and Design consists of 9 departments:

Interior Design, Window Display and Set Design, Painting, Sculpture, Ceramics, Metals and Jewellery, Graphics, Photography and Textiles.

The School is attended by 750 students and there are 85 teachers working in it, and it is situated at one of the most beautiful city squares.

After a four-year educational programme and the state final exams, our students continue their education at art academies and university colleges.

The School has a gallery which has been in continuous use for 30 years now.

ISLAND IN A SCHOOL, SCHOOL ON AN ISLAND, 2011

FOR: St. Mary's Foundation, Mljet, Croatia

Students of all the School departments participated in the charitable project for St. Mary's Foundation on the Island of Mljet. They designed and produced souvenirs inspired by the island of Mljet as well as by the monastery and church of St. Mary. All the funds raised by selling the souvenirs were intended for the Foundation as a symbolic contribution to the renovation of the monastery, which is a zero-category monument from the 12th century.

The „Park inside Park“ workshop, organized with the students of the Sculpture and Interior Design Departments and stretching over 1.5 school year, included various activities: from lectures on the historic use of timber in Croatia to setting up a sculpture park in the village of Sošice in the Žumberak nature park. The intention is to set up through time new sculpture parks in the nature parks of the Republic of Croatia. The Sculpture Park was realized through the cooperation of UBU (the Former Students' Association) and the School of Applied Arts and Design, with the support of the Croatian Ministry of Forestry.

In 45 shop-windows scattered around in the broader area of the School of Applied Arts and Design, the works of 60 students were displayed. The exhibition lasted for 2 weeks. The opening in the evening hours had a form of a walk along the city streets by the route defined by the shop-windows, with the visitors holding yellow balloons decorated with the school logo so that they could recognize each other in the crowd. The project won the Architecture and Children Golden Cubes Award at the national level and was presented within the 2011 UIA Congress in

The exhibitions reflect the knowledge, skills and creative potential that the Textiles Department students have developed during their education in the School. The exhibits are the result of various creative processes. Fashion drawings and projects are displayed as independent art pieces but simultaneously as a foundation of creating in other materials. Next to them, sculptural clothing is put up on display as well as hand-woven tapestries. The beauty and diversity of the works were inspired by the abundance of our textile heritage converted into a contemporary artistic expression.
